A PERMANENT CENSUS HUREAU.

The work on the eleventh census is not yet completed that already a tall has been framed providing for the preliminary work on the twelth century. Practically there is no International Detween the consume in other is began and the work goes ourcon thumbly. Ench new cents, however, is moder a new supermittendent, and each superintendent refectationnew corps of usstements, and otherwork to their done with time by inexperienced and intrained hards. How much better and cheaper it would be If this "continuous performance" of census taking were under the management of a permanent linnous. Skilled men confatake up the labor of a new census and have it well under way while men of to exper-I nee are puzzling their heads over how the thing should be done.

The cost of the eleventh census can be measured der the amounts appropriated from time to time. These appropriations suggestate $11.531.462.50. The cost of printing, engraving and binding the final results may be a little less than the amount appropriated for that purpose, but most probably the amount given is as near the exact cost of the last census up to date as it can be stated at present. When the work is fully completed it will have cost the government in round numbers about $12,000,000, or at the rate of $1,20,000 a year since the work began. Under a permanent bureau this work could in all probability have been done for one-third less, it would also have been done more quickly and more satisfactorily. We are paying rather dearly for our lack of intelligent enterprise in this matter of census taking.

The publication, in one of the local newspapers; of a story extelling the foxy cunning of our prosecutor in outwitting the notorious Jimmy Considine, was, apparently, intended to raise Mr. Lowe's political stock and discredit his censors. THE BURNING OF THE AUDITORIUM. The sentiment that preserves the illusions of the stage also emphrines the structure of the playhouse. Ever since there has been a home for the dramatic and musical arts, the people have assumed a sort of proprietary interest in the place of their habitation. That gleam like sunty beavens, Ne'er to grow colder or dimmer:

Now far in the distance, now shamer near, Lighting the snows of the Sidering Year,

Pares there are that fromthe, Bleared with a silent weeping, Welfd in a sindows pottow.

As if end as your beeping Faces of disating brightness,

With childlike radiative lighted, Planding with many a featily Nor care nor time but blighted.

Aglow in the Christmus halo,

Shinnig with heavenly faster, These are the fairy faces That round the hearthstone chister. These the deep, render records,

Sacred in all their meetiness, That wakening purest families, Setten us with their sweetness As gathered where thekering tagets burn,
